Topics for Discussion

Department of Finance examination history and processes

Loan Originator Compliance Requirements

History of the Department's Examination Process

- Between 1996 and 2000, the Department of Finance conducted approximately 10 examinations.
- Examinations were "for-cause"—based upon observation; due to complaints; or resulting from information from related sources.

 The process lasted several days and regularly resulted in administrative action.

An Evolving Process

- At the end of 2000, the examination module evolved into a routine process.
- Exams became routine based upon regions of operations.
- Exams became limited scope, meaning they were generally focused on compliance review.

Examination Focus

Full Scope Examination—

- Assessment of business management through background information and from information gathered through interviews and investigative testimony.
- An in-depth analysis of accounting measures.
- Re-underwriting of specific loan files.

Limited Scope Examinations—

- General business management.
- An analysis of advertising.
- A review of the accounting and record-keeping measures of the licensee.
- A compliance review of a percentage of loans.

Additional Focus to Account for Loan Originator Activities

- Beginning in 2006, examination procedures will account for individual loan originator activity.
- Loan review will encompass all licensed and active originators.
- Examination findings will include individual loan originators when necessary.
- Loan originator compliance will be ranked in a manner similar to mortgage brokers/lenders.

Areas Reviewed in Examinations

- Licensure in compliance with the Idaho Residential Mortgage Practices Act (Act).
- Advertising and marketing in compliance with the Act and Regulation Z of Truth-In-Lending.
- Record-keeping in compliance with the Act.

Areas Reviewed in Examinations

Loan Originations—

- Compliance with requirements to provide Idaho specific forms.
- Compliance with RESPA and Regulation X requirements to provide disclosures.
- Compliance with Regulation Z requirements to provide disclosures.
- Compliance with consumer protection provisions of federal and state law.
